Bunubu and the Firefly Ferris Wheel
Careful observation and calm thinking can solve even the fastest problems.

One warm evening, Bunubu followed a trail of twinkling lights to a hidden meadow beneath the roots.

There he found dozens of fireflies building a glowing Ferris wheel from twigs, thread, and sparkling dew drops.

'Welcome to the Firefly Fair!' buzzed Fizz, the chief engineer. 'Would you like the first ride?'

Bunubu climbed into a tiny leaf basket, and the Ferris wheel slowly began to turn.

At first the ride was gentle and beautiful. Bunubu could see glowing mushrooms, lantern flowers, and winding tunnels below.

Then the wheel spun faster. And faster. And even faster!

The fireflies zoomed in circles, their lights making glowing swirls in the air. 'We can't slow it down!' cried Fizz.

Bunubu carefully looked around the wheel and spotted a tiny wooden lever hidden beneath a thread spool.

The lever was labeled Gentle Speed. Bunubu pulled it softly, and the Ferris wheel slowed to a calm, happy spin.

Everyone cheered. The fireflies enjoyed rides all evening, and Bunubu became the honorary keeper of the Gentle-Speed Lever.
