Bunubu and the Secret Soup Spring
Understanding what others enjoy can help solve problems in gentle and creative w

One chilly morning, Bunubu followed a delicious smell drifting from beneath the forest floor.

The scent led him to a hidden underground spring filled with warm bubbling water that smelled exactly like vegetable soup.

Chef Mole greeted him with a smile. 'Welcome to the Secret Soup Spring!'

Bunubu peered into the spring and gasped. Bright orange carrots were swimming through the water like tiny fish.

'We need a few carrots for today's soup,' said Chef Mole. 'But they keep swimming away!'

Every time Bunubu reached for one, the carrots splashed their leafy tops and darted to the other side of the spring.

Then Bunubu noticed the carrots loved music.
Whenever Chef Mole hummed a tune, they swam closer.

Bunubu sang a cheerful carrot song. The swimming carrots twirled, danced, and gathered near the shore.

The carrots happily volunteered for the soup, and the others continued swimming and playing in the warm spring.

That evening, everyone shared a delicious bowl of vegetable soup. Bunubu smiled, knowing that kindness and music had saved the day.
