Chibub and Bunubu: The Acorn Airship
New adventures feel safer and sweeter when friends help us learn.

One breezy morning, Bunubu found a giant acorn resting beside his carrot patch.

When he tapped the acorn gently, it popped open like a little door and unfolded into a tiny airship.

The airship had leaf sails, twig railings, and a walnut wheel just the right size for Bunubu's paws.

Chibub floated down from the clouds and smiled.
'I can teach you how to ride the garden breeze.'

Bunubu climbed aboard, but as soon as the airship lifted, his floppy ears flapped wildly in the wind.

'Hold on to your ears!' laughed Chibub kindly, tying them gently with a soft ribbon so they would not blow into his eyes.

Together they sailed above the garden, past sunflower towers, berry bushes, and sparkling puddles.

A group of garden birds showed them the safest currents, while Chibub sprinkled sky glow to keep the leaf sails steady.

Bunubu steered carefully and discovered that flying was easier when he listened to the wind and trusted his friend.

When they landed softly beside the carrot patch, Bunubu hugged his floppy ears and the acorn airship. From then on, sky trips always came with ribbons, snacks, and Chibub as co-pilot.
