Chibub and Bunubu: The Carrot Comet

The best treasures are often meant to bring different friends together.

One sparkling night, a glowing carrot-shaped comet streaked across the sky with a trail of golden glitter.

The comet landed gently on a grassy hill halfway between Chibub's rooftop and Bunubu's burrow.

'It must belong to the sky,' said Chibub. 'It came from the stars.'

'It looks exactly like a carrot,' said Bunubu. 'It must belong underground with the garden vegetables.'

The two friends carefully examined the comet. Its top sparkled like starlight, but tiny roots glowed along its sides.

Soon beetles, birds, worms, and squirrels gathered around, each offering a different idea about where the comet belonged.

That evening, the comet began to shine brighter than ever. Golden light reached up toward the clouds while silver roots stretched gently into the soil.

Chibub and Bunubu finally understood. The comet was not meant for only one world.

Together they planted the comet on the hill between sky and burrow. It grew into a glowing carrot tree with star-shaped leaves.

From then on, creatures from above and below visited the Carrot Comet Tree. Chibub and Bunubu smiled, knowing some treasures are best shared.
