Chibub and Bunubu: The Kite Beneath the Roots

When friends share what they know, even a tangled problem can become a new adven

One breezy morning, Chibub flew his favorite kite from his rooftop above the clouds.

The kite dipped, looped, and twirled until a sudden gust sent it diving straight toward the forest.

Down below, Bunubu was watering his carrot patch when the kite slipped through the roots and tangled around three carrots.

'Oh my carrots!' cried Bunubu as the kite tail fluttered between the leafy tops.

Chibub followed the kite string underground and found Bunubu carefully untangling the bright ribbon.

'I am sorry,' said Chibub. 'My kite forgot that roots are not clouds.' Bunubu smiled and said, 'Then let us teach it the tunnel way.'

Together they carried the kite into a maze of twisty root tunnels where worms, beetles, and moles pointed out safe paths.

Chibub gave the kite sky glow, while Bunubu guided it around carrots, under roots, and through little mushroom arches.

At last, the kite flew smoothly through the tunnel maze, its tail sparkling like a tiny rainbow beneath the ground.

When the kite rose back into the sky, Chibub and Bunubu cheered. From then on, they flew it both above the clouds and beneath the roots.
