Chibub and Bunubu: The Moonbeam Under the Garden
Working together helps us guide lost friends safely home.

One quiet night, a soft silver moonbeam slipped through a crack in the garden and disappeared beneath the ground.

The moon noticed one of its beams was missing and asked Chibub to help find it.

Carrying a lantern filled with sky glow, Chibub floated down through the clouds and into the moonlit garden.

Below the roots, Bunubu spotted a pale silver light wandering through the tunnels. 'That must be the lost moonbeam,' he said.

When Chibub and Bunubu met, they decided to search together. Chibub lit the dark corners while Bunubu led the way.

They tiptoed past sleeping moles, yawning crickets, and mushrooms tucked under tiny leaf blankets.

The moonbeam drifted deeper into the tunnels, fascinated by glowing roots and sparkling crystal walls.

At last, they found the moonbeam resting beside an underground pond, watching silver fish swim in circles.

'The moon misses you,' Chibub said gently. The moonbeam twinkled and floated happily back toward the garden crack.

Together, Chibub and Bunubu guided the moonbeam home. That night, the moon shone extra brightly, and the two friends promised to share many more adventures between sky and burrow.
