Chibub and Bunubu: The Mushroom Elevator to the Clouds
Big ideas work best when we take time to make them safe and comfortable for ever

One morning, Bunubu built a mushroom elevator beside his burrow so his underground friends could travel more easily.

At first, the elevator worked perfectly. Beetles, worms, and snails rode up and down with big smiles.

Then the mushroom began to grow. And grow.
And grow even more.

Soon the elevator stretched higher than the tallest trees and disappeared into the clouds.

Far above, Chibub was watering cloud flowers on his condo balcony when a giant mushroom platform popped up beside him.

Out stepped several confused beetles, three surprised worms, and one very dizzy snail named Shelly.

'Are we still underground?' asked Shelly, wobbling in circles.

Chibub laughed kindly and welcomed everyone to the clouds while Bunubu climbed up the elevator to see what had happened.

Together, Chibub and Bunubu found the magic growth knob hidden beneath a mushroom cap and turned it to gentle travel mode.

The elevator settled at the perfect height, creating a safe path between sky and burrow. From then on, friends could visit both worlds without making any snails too dizzy.
