Chibub and Bunubu: The Star Seed

Great things grow when different strengths come together and help one another.

One clear night, Bunubu saw a shooting star streak across the sky and tumble into his garden.

When he hurried outside, he did not find a star.
Instead, he found a tiny glowing seed resting among the carrots.

The seed sparkled softly with silver and gold light, bright enough to make the dew drops twinkle.

Bunubu sent a message to Chibub, who floated down from the clouds carrying a lantern of starlight.

'This is a Star Seed,' said Chibub. 'It needs both sky light and garden soil to grow properly.'

Together they searched for the perfect place and found a hill where roots reached deep underground and branches stretched toward the clouds.

Bunubu gently planted the Star Seed while Chibub sprinkled it with sparkling sky glow.

The seed began to grow at once. A silver stem rose upward while golden roots spread through the earth.

By morning, a beautiful Star Tree stood on the hill, glowing softly so both sky creatures and burrow friends could find their way.

Every evening, Chibub and Bunubu visited the Star Tree together. Its light reminded them that wonderful things can grow when different worlds work side by side.
