Chibub and the Rainy-Day Parade

A cheerful story about turning disappointment into something new.

A Parade Idea

Chibub woke up with a parade idea.
He wanted flags, music, and happy steps.
Today would be the best marching day.

Colorful Flags

He made tiny flags from paper.
Red, yellow, blue, and green.
His halo glowed with every color.

Tap Tap Tap

Then tap tap tap came on the window.
Rain slid down the glass.
Chibub's smile slipped a little.

Ruined

“My parade is ruined,” he whispered.
He sat on the rug and hugged his knees.
The flags waited beside him.

Rain Can March Too

Then Chibub saw his little umbrella.
It was bright and round like a flower.
“Maybe rain can march too,” he said.

Puddle Drums

Outside, puddles made funny sounds.
Plip, plop, splash.
Chibub tapped them like tiny drums.

Rainy-Day Colors

One neighbor opened a red umbrella.
Another brought a yellow rain hat.
Soon everyone had rainy-day colors.

Umbrellas Twirled

They marched around the courtyard.
Umbrellas twirled and puddles sang.
Chibub laughed louder than the rain.

Tiny Rainbows

The rain slowed to a sparkle.
Sunlight peeked between the clouds.
The flags looked like tiny rainbows.

Something Even Better

That night, Chibub tucked the flags beside his bed.
The parade was not the one he planned.
It was something even better.
