

Mochimop and the Toy Box Black Hole

— A messy toy box turns into a deep space gravity well, and only a crayon map can save the day. —

Mochimop and the Toy Box Black Hole
The Great Crayon Rescue

The Disappearing Toys

Mochimop trotted over to the big wooden toy box. He wanted to find his favorite squeaky ball. But when he flipped the lid open, all he saw was a deep, swirling purple mist. Whoosh!

Swallowed Whole

The toy box black hole was very hungry.
Mochimop sniffed the edge.
It had swallowed three wooden blocks, one shiny spoon, and half of a strawberry jelly sandwich!

Calling for Backup

Mochimop let out a soft, fluffy bark.
Pipixel hurried into the playroom, his round glasses sliding down his nose.
“A black hole in the closet?” Pipixel gasped. “This is a major rescue mission!”

The Crayon Strategy

Pipixel grabbed a huge sheet of brown packing paper.

He unrolled it across the floor.

With a bright red crayon, he began to sketch a rescue plan.

The Rescue Map

“Look,” said Pipixel, pointing at the scribbles.
The map showed a big crayon arrow passing the blocks, looping around the spoon, and landing right on the sandwich.
Mochimop licked the crayon drawing happily.

Entering the Vortex

Pipixel tied a bright blue yarn rope around Mochimop's tummy.

“Hold onto the map!” Pipixel cheered.

Mochimop bravely leaped into the purple mist, his white mop-strings flying everywhere.

Floating in Toy Space

Inside the box, everything was floaty and magical. Mochimop drifted right past the three blocks. They were slowly spinning like little wooden planets.

The Spoon Loop

Mochimop looked at the crayon map in his paws.
It told him to make a sharp turn past the silver spoon.
He kicked his little legs and swam through the purple air.
